

April 5, 2006

I have one major concern about this proposal: that it is yet another way for WalMart to "feed" on those less fortunate. I can just see them charging high interest rates for loans, etc., trying to look like "the good guy" by offering loans to those who couldn't otherwise qualify.

I just don't trust that anything that WalMart proposes is for the good of the people, but rather that it's for the good of the WalMart executives. I say let's make WalMart focus on providing insurance, living wages and other benefits to the people who are working for them. Don't support their efforts to spread into still more ways that they can exploit communities. WalMart needs to be reined in and held responsible for simple business practices that prove their integrity. Until they do that, no more expansion!

Betty Owen